Journal of Research in Science Teaching

Conflict of Interest Disclosure – Final Submission

In educational research, professional manuscripts and other communications are presumed to be unbiased in their presentation and interpretation of evidence. Authors' economic and commercial interests or those of their family, their longstanding relationships, or other factors may color the way data is presented or interpreted in their work. In keeping with professional standards for publication, the Journal requires disclosure of all conflicts or relationships that may potentially bias the content of the submitted work.

In general, disclosure of possible conflicts will not prejudice the Journal's editors negatively toward the article. The editors will determine whether any reported conflict is "significant" based on individual circumstances. In most cases, conflicts that are felt to be significant will be reported along with the article so that the reader may assess and make allowances for any possible bias. The JRST editorial team encourages an open, non-threatening and transparent dialog with authors (and ultimately with readers) over potential biases, and asks that authors disclose relationships or interests even if you do not feel that a conflict exists.

Each listed author on the paper must fill out and submit a conflict of interest disclosure form along with their manuscript. Forms should be uploaded as "supplementary material not for review" in the Manuscript Central system and titled AuthorLastName_COI_Disclosure.pdf.

Every box must be filled in. If there is no reportable conflict, please enter "None."

Manuscript Title:

1. Funding sources and contributions.
All funding sources, including donated resources, contributions in kind, etc. that financed or assisted in the work being published must be disclosed. Please list here all funding sources not noted in the Acknowledgments section of the manuscript.

2. Personal financial holdings
You must disclose financial holdings, including corporate stock, stock options, contracts or other bookable financial asset that you or members of your immediate family have that might bear a relationship to the subject matter of your submission, whether the relationship is beneficial or harmful. Please disclose the entity, nature, amount, and owner of each holding.

3. Consulting and other grant funding
You must disclose all consulting fees, speaking fees, reimbursed travel, fees from expert testimony, grants, and awards received by you or members of your immediate family in the last 5 years from any entity that has a financial interest in the results presented in the manuscript, or financial interest in the materials/tools/software etc. highlighted in the work. Financial interest includes both possible benefit and possible harm (for example, if you describe a competitor's product in a favorable light).

4. Affiliations
You must disclose all service by you or a member of your immediate family within the last 5 years as an officer, member of the board, member of an advisory group, or other corporate affiliation (whether for profit or not for profit) with any entity engaged in activity related to the work presented in the manuscript or whose funding may be positively or negatively affected by the results presented.

5. Royalties, Patents, Licensing
You must disclose all planned, pending, or awarded patents, royalty contracts, licensing fees, trademarks, trade secrets, etc. held by yourself, your immediate family, or any institution with which you are affiliated which relate to the work presented in the manuscript or which may be affected, positively or negatively, by the results reported.

6. Personal Relationships
You must disclose all close personal relationships you have or have had in the past 5 years with agents, officers, or employees of any entity which is related to or potentially affected by the work presented in the manuscript.

I declare that I have read the Journal's policy on conflict of interest, and have made full disclosure of any and all potential conflicts as described.
